This helps Les pay for his specialized physical therapy at SCI Recovery Project in Denver. Les attends his physical therapy 3 times a week, which allows him to continue to take those small steps in his recovery. Since being paralyzed in 2008 in a motorcycle accident, the former Colorado Eagles player has shown the same strength and determination that made him a fan favorite on the ice. He has battled back and worked hard at SCI recovery project to regain movement and function that allows him the independence to live his life to the fullest.

Borsheim continues to be a positive presence for both the Eagles and the Northern Colorado community. Les is the color man on the radio for the Eagles and frequently talks at area schools about perseverance, adversity and the power of a positive attitude.
